Women are matching up brightly colored cotton-knit tanks this summer by Fanny Pany Land. Some of the tanks, evoking 1970s-era children's clothes, are decorated with oversize leather appliques of tigers and lions. They include giant ladybugs, sharks and whimsical-looking mushrooms; $90 at Nordstrom by helix in New York (212-677-6467).

Beachgoers confident enough to forgo $100 Pucci towels can try off with new options offering special features. A 40-by-60-inch towel with a flag motif, for instance, by Towel Down has an opening that can be filled with sand to form a pillow and turned inside out to form a backpack. All the cooler pockets with sand to weigh them down. ($39.95 at www.thetoweldown.com.) The Beach Towel Company has a version with a 48-inch diameter that turns inside out to become a drawstring bag. ($29.95 at www.thebeachtowel.com.) A Brighton Forge beach towel from Garnet & Co folds into a matching canvas tote, too. ($36 at www.garnetandco.com.) Target's two-person beach towel comes with plastic sliders that can be used to secure its promotional covers. ($19.99 at Target stores; Carter's lined towel for a standard change lounge is $6.95 (www.thebeachstore.com).)

Toddlers can slip into hooded towels that look like sea creatures. By Third Space Sports, the towels ($13.95 at www.thebeachstore.com) have hand pockets. Older children may want to show their shells in the pocket that is attached to a custom-flag print towel by Gap. ($14.99)
